INTRODUCTION

Ruby Price

I want to congratulate our graduates, the Class of 2008, on your graduation from Pacific High School. I celebrate the accomplishments of this class of fine young men and women who have met the requirements of the rigorous course of instruction set out by our national, state and local elected officials. We are requiring our students to be better able to demonstrate that they have mastered the skills and knowledge necessary to be productive and successful citizens in a democratic society. You who are graduating have done just that. We are celebrating the completion of the first years of your public school education.

Webster's Dictionary defines graduation as, a "step, degree or stage in a series". Think about that for just a moment. You have completed a major step in the series of steps that will make up your life. Reaching this milestone required hard work, conviction, and determination on your part. It also required the support and guidance of those who are joining in your celebration today. Think of all the times you were ready to give up – the times when it would have been so much easier to quit . . . to skip school . . . to forget homework . . . to miss a test. But, you didn't. You held yourselves accountable. You wanted to succeed, and you have.

I suspect that a number of family members and staff who have also had those moments. But they never let their support for you or their belief in your ability slip. They have been with you all the way. Be proud of yourselves. Be proud of your successes. But don't forget the definition of 'graduation' – it is one step in a series . . . tomorrow you will be starting yet another exciting step. Approach it with that same positive attitude you've exhibited in high school and follow the advice of Confucius, "Where ever you go, go with all your heart."

Many of you will be heading to college, others into the workforce. Some have joined our armed forces. Some may travel for a while. Your paths will take many directions; your successes will be many and varied. Some of you may not see each other again until future reunions bring you together. Others will continue close friendships. Whatever your direction, remember that your school family and your own family will always believe in your abilities. And I want you to believe in yourself as well.

Perhaps someone who has been with most of you since your earliest days of reading Dr. Seuss said it best:

"You have brains in your head.
You have feet in your shoes.
You can steer yourself in any direction you choose.
You are on your own.
And you know what you know.
You are the guy who'll decide where you go."

To all the students at Pacific High this year, I am very proud of you. Remember to care, aim high, and never stop learning. I expect great things from all of you!
